Science and Space

- The experiment is to investigate the effects of weather patterns on the temperature of Earth's surface. Niamh and Kitty were "very excited" to have their experiment accepted for the International Space Station.

- "We can measure the heat exposure of the surface of the Earth using an infrared camera, known as Izzy, to take photos of the regions that the ISS passes over. We will analyse these to compare the temperature of certain regions of the Earth's surface with the cloud coverage passing over them at that time."
